FLOOR DEBATE

March 13, 2002 LB 1003

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator, you might refresh people's memory as to...as to what it is because we didn't really get a chance to oppor...to, an opportunity to discuss it yesterday I don't think.

SENATOR DIERKS: Well, it lessens some of the hardness of the language in the original bill that allowed Game and Parks officials to have access to the landowner's places to inspect and look at problems in the...in the area. If there is...if there is some chronic wasting disease, probably need to go on to these facilities to take a look. The original language was a little bit harsh. It, more or less,...it was...we thought we needed to put the words "reasonable access" instead of some of the hard words that were in the original bill. So that's exactly all it does is just make it easier for...for...I'd like to find that so I can just read that one piece of that information into it, if I can, if I can do that, Senator. Here, I think we have it. It says, "shall make a reasonable attempt to gain access to the property by permission of the property owner, tenant, lessee, occupant, or person in control." And a little bit farther down there it says, "The property owner shall retain all legal rights to recover damages from such entry, except that damages for trespass shall not be available." And I think someplace in there we talked about...we talked about the personal property as well as the...as well as the real estate I think, so that other personal property could be protected as well like the owner's vehicles and fencing and that sort of stuff. I don't see it in here right now, but I think that was part of the original amendment that I had, Senator Beutler. Did you remember that?

SENATOR BEUTLER: Senator Dierks, this...this amendment was included in my amendment originally because it was related to me that counsel for the committee and your counsel and Game and Parks were all in agreement on this version, and that the only thing that remained to be done on this piece was on Select File to add Senator Chambers' little addition with respect to a uniformed officer being the one who came upon the land. So that was going to wait till Select, but other than that it was presented to me as something that had been worked out between your staff and committee counsel and Game and Parks.
